Have you ever had a bad experience with a photo app, a website, or a web tool? Tell us about it. Some people like to rant for the fun of it, but others take it seriously and want to avoid similar instances, even if it sounds like something that would never happened to them. Use this thread to share your experiences. If you want to rant, by all means, while we all sit back and watch, laugh and commiserate. I've been using Lightroom 4.3.1 since after its release last year. I love it. I'm so pleased with the new version of this software that I couldn't put it down when it was released, even when the need to test the software also prompted me to retest Adobe Photoshop 11. Lightroom 5 is significantly different in enough ways that it is probably impossible to sum up everything that the software offers, but the version 6 release will continue to evolve on its own. This is the perfect place to discuss some of the new features in both programs, so offer your comments. Feel free to offer alternative suggestions too. Lightroom 5 is not only a software, but a complete package. It may look like it's missing some features that I think users are going to appreciate. I have noted some of the features that were missing so that you can make an informed decision. I'll highlight certain key new features I like in Lightroom 5 and then discuss what I think could have been improved. Overall, every feature in Lightroom 5 is a step in the right direction for the software. I think those of you who care for the product and software will appreciate downloading this version of Lightroom 5, because the new version looks great and has some impressive new features. But those of you who are just casually adding images and albums without investing much time in Lightroom will, I'm sure, find it's not as revolutionary as advertised.

The Adjust Color tool helps you fine-tune color in your image. It is one of the most important artistic tools in the Adobe Creative Suite. It helps you fix colors, including specific colors and related colors. The Adjust Shadows and Highlights tool adds or subtracts contrast in a selected area. You can choose the contrast amount between 0 and 100, which helps achieve the desired lightness or darkness. You can also choose to use the channel information in the image. If you are using data from a scanner, images may only be available in RGB (Red, Green, Blue) channels. The Adjust Brightness/Contrast tool has default settings that you can adjust to lighten or darken the image. You can also use masking tools to define regions you want to change, which helps you achieve more precise results. When you save an image the Auto Save option will ensure a certain interval between your changes, preventing you from making errors and accidentally overwriting your image. You can turn this option on or off in the Preferences menu. The Crop tool allows you to select and remove unwanted portions of the selected area. For example this allows you to trim off the edges to remove those awkward angles. You can use an automatic edge detection or manually choose the edges you want to keep and remove the rest. The Dodge and Burn tools allow you to change the contrast of small details of the image to make them stand out and are visible. In addition, you can remove small details in the opposite way or "burn" details that weren't visible before. You can use any of the color channels in an image - Red, Green, Blue etc. e3d0a04c9c
